THURSDAY EVENING, DEC'R. 13.

The Sioux Question.

A dispatch to the New York Herald from Fort Walsh, Northwest Territory, says: Those who apprehend serious Indian troubles in the spring have some ominous facts to worry about. Whether Sitting Bull stays this side the border or returns to the United States territory the prospect appears equally bad for peace.-Here his bands are invaders of the hunting grounds of the Blackfeet, who resent the en croachment. There they would be regarded as outlaws, unless they signified their acceptance of the terms recently offered them by the United States Commissioners.

In the meantime Sitting Bull's camp is continually reinforced by accessions of Sioux from Montana and Dakota. Sixty lodges of them came over only a few days ago, and Major Walsh, hearing the news, went immediately to Sitting Bull's camp and held a council with the new chiefs.

They stated to him, among other things, that after the battle with Custer on the Little Big Horn River, in 1876, the camp divided, Sitting Bull going north and Crozy Horse to the Platte and thence toward the Spotted Tail Agency .-They stayed there until the death of Crazy Horse, before which event they say the United States government attempted to disarm and dismount them. Some surrendered their horses and arms; others cached their arms. Many did not go quite to the agency, but remained in camps some distance away. They said that Crazy Horse told them when dying: "I have always wanted to go to the land of the white mother, but my father per suaded me to stay here. I shall be dead in a few minutes and will then go to the white mother's country. I want you all to follow me: you see the Americans want to kill us. There is no peace for you in this country; you can live no longer with the Great Father. If you want to live and raise up your families you must go with me to the land of the white mother and the home of our grandfathers.' The whole nation, said the chiefs, was roused by these dying words of Crazy Horse and they resolved to move north. They were forty eight days on the journey. On the twentieth day a scout overtook them and told them that unless they turned back they would be overhauled by United States troops. To gain time they told the scout to return and assure the white chief that they would turn back, and that there was no need for him to send any soldiers after them. When the scout was well out of sight they packed up and started north again as fast as they could travel.

There are 9 chiefs with the new arrivals, viz : Black Moon of the Minneconjous, and Yellow Thunder, Thunder Ball, Running Bull, Pretty Thunder, Fire Cloud, Running Eigle, Black Bear and Wa-ha-too, Minneenjous and Ogal-Major Walsh is of the opinion that the dy ing request of Crazy Horse will induce the whole Sioux nation at present on the United States side of the line to cross to the Canadian side. He thinks they will travel in small camps

if the American forces should be large and hotly pursue them; otherwise they will probably move over in large bodies. LOVE AND WANT .- An elegantly dressed young man about twenty three, wearing black kids, walked into police headquarters at New York yesterday evening, accompanied by a sty-lishly dressed young woman. He asked to see the Inspector, and stated that he and his companion were both tired and hungry, as they had walked all the way from Westchester. They declined to give their names or relation to each other. They were given a substantial supper and shown to separate apartments among the detectives' cells. When questioned apart their stories did not agree in detai', though in outline they were the same. Both claimed to come from Canada, but would go no further into the geography of that locality. As it is thought more than probable that they are young runaways they will be held until they render a proper account of themselves. FOR SALE OR RENT.
